In addition to V-chips for television, I would like to see the same standards applied to radio. Or at least a way to block certian stations. Clearly, there should be a way to prevent children from tuning into some of the rathier obsene songs that are playing on some radio stations.